About the imprint

ForeverStori Publishing is an independent publisher of thoughtful books for children, adults, families, and caregivers. Its catalogue includes practical resources for navigating difficult seasons, person-centered books that encourage understanding and compassion, and imaginative stories that celebrate individuality, belonging, and connection. Although its books serve different audiences, they share one belief: every person and every story matters. The imprint is a sister to ForeverStori, a platform for preserving the stories, voices, and wishes of the people we love.

Meet the founder

Cindy Gerard is the founder, creator, and publisher behind ForeverStori Publishing. A teacher and family caregiver, she develops books designed to help people feel seen, understood, and valued — guiding each project from concept through content development, editing, design, and publication.

Interview topics

- Why families notice changes long before a diagnosis
- Behavior as communication in dementia care
- Why siblings fight after a parent's diagnosis
- Person-centered care in plain language
- Caregiver burnout and the myth of self-care

The Person Comes First — a six-book series for families and caregivers

1	It Was Funny... Until It Wasn't	For the moment you realize the stories you used to laugh about have started to worry you.
2	Something Isn't Right	For the point where small changes have become a pattern and you need to know what to do next.
3	We All Love Them—So Why Can't We Agree?	For families where everyone wants what's best and no two people define it the same way.
4	The Story Behind the Behavior	For the days when behavior stops making sense and you need a way to understand it.
5	I Am Still Here	For the person living with the diagnosis — written to them, not about them.
6	I Said I'm Fine	For families meeting resistance from someone who insists nothing is wrong.
